National Workshop On "Creating an Exhaustive Reading List for Research"

Thursday, 27th April, 2023, 12 to 2 p.m.

Concept Note

There has been a sea change in the way people search for information after the invasion of the Internet and the associated technologies. Earlier it was difficult for information to get distributed to the various parts of the globe because of the barriers of Distance, Time, and Language. It was a dream of information scientists to have control of the information flow. But the invasion of the Internet has changed the scenario as a whole and now the amount of information that gets produced and gets disseminated is tremendous and difficult to control. This phenomenon is called an Information Explosion. Hence every one is facing Information Overload.

Researchers are the people most affected as they have to depend on the reports of earlier research a lot. It is very difficult to identify the research reports relevant to one's topic of research because of the enormous amount of information in front of us. But technology is helping us to identify documents relevant to our topic of research using digital tools. Through this session, we will learn how to make an exhaustive list of journal articles on a topic of research.

Objectives

- Provide training in the search of databases for relevant journal articles.
- Provide training on making an exhaustive list of journal articles on a topic of research.
- Provide training in the Citation and creation of a Bibliography to avoid plagiarism.

ABOUT THE SEMINAR

In the global scenario of amazing development of 21st century, exclusion of some segments of society is one of the major issues across the globe. Among the issues of social exclusion, gender based exclusion is one of the pressing concerns which has certainly a bearing on the overall development of human society. Since social and economic development is closely linked to the government, the government of the most of countries have designed the policies of women empowerment. In India too, we have introduced many inclusive Policies and affirmative actions. Considering the performance of government's policies and long standing socio-cultural diversity, success in achieving women empowerment is not as per expectation. This seminar is an attempt to debate on such issues and challenges of empowerment of women with reference to inclusive policies of government and ascertain their implementation through debate, dialogue, discourse and deliberation.
